SINGAPORE BANKS RAISING CORPORATE GOVERNANCE AND TRANSPARENCY STANDARDS

Working Group recommendations will bring disclosure standards in line with global best practices.

SINGAPORE, MAY 10, 2002 - Singapore banks are moving to improve their corporate governance and standards of transparency.

The three Singapore banks have formed a Working Group, with a representative from the Monetary Authority of Singapore (MAS) and advisors from the private sector, to study the best practices in disclosure and governance structures that the banks could adopt here, in addition to existing legal requirements. The banks are committed to implement, with effect from their Annual General Meetings held from January 1, 2003, the Working Group's proposals, some of which go beyond the requirements recommended in the Code of Corporate Governance (Code) announced in April 2001.

The proposals include the following:

- The qualifying criteria for an independent director will be tightened. An independent director will be one who is independent of both executive functions and substantial shareholders. In assessing the independence of a director, the Nominating Committee will take into account the business relationship element stated in the Code as well.
- A majority of the Board of Directors will comprise independent directors.
- The Chairperson of the Nominating Committee will be independent, in addition to the present requirement that a majority of its members will be independent.
- A majority of the Compensation Committee will comprise independent directors.
All Audit Committee members will be non-executive directors. A majority of the Audit Committee, including the Chairperson, will comprise independent directors.

The Working Group has also made recommendations to improve disclosure standards, many of which have already been incorporated into the 2001 annual reports.

These recommendations include:

- Disclosure of aggregate credit facilities to directors and director-related entities.
- Audit Committees will disclose their opinions as to whether the banks' financials are fairly presented.
- Audit Committees will also disclose that they have received the requisite information evidencing the external auditors' independence.
- Banks will provide greater information and discussions on their risk taking philosophy, activities and the various risks arising from these activities.

The Working Group is chaired by Jackson Tai (President & Chief Operating Officer of DBS Bank), and includes Chris Matten (Chief Financial Officer of OCBC Bank) and Kuek Tong Au (Executive Vice President of Corporate Services, United Overseas Bank). MAS’ representative is Timothy Ng. Advisors from the private sector include Lucien Wong from Allen & Gledhill and Dominic Nixon from PricewaterhouseCoopers.

The Working Group, which was started in January 2001, sought to improve the level of corporate governance and disclosure in Singapore by developing and refining current guidelines, setting disclosure standards for local banks, and reviewing the composition of Board committees. The recommendations reflect local banks' continued commitment towards playing a leading role in raising corporate governance standards in the region.

"The recommendations are very important for Singapore and Asia," said Jackson Tai.

"It is especially important for banks, as custodians of depositor funds, to take a leading position in practising transparency and providing timely disclosure of key information to the public. Banks must also be viewed to have a predominantly independent Board of Directors which is able to discharge its responsibilities
Kuek Tong Au said, "As an integral part of the economy, it is important for banks to address investors' and customers' need for readily accessible and timely information when making investment or other financial decisions. The recommendations, we hope, will help the market better understand the workings of the banking community and thereby strengthen financial stability in Singapore."

Chris Matten added, "We are fully committed to integrity and fair dealing in all our activities, and to create a more investor-friendly environment. We hope that this will in turn encourage other public-listed companies to be more transparent."

A recent report by Standard and Poor's on transparency and disclosure, hailed Singapore's companies as having the highest levels of transparency and disclosure in Asia, but remarked that none of them achieved anything close to full marks. Standard and Poor's indicated that a well-governed company has high standards of timely disclosure and transparency, enabling shareholders, creditors and directors to effectively monitor the actions of management and the operating and financial performance of the company.

Among other benefits, high standards of transparency and disclosure have led to a reduced cost of equity and diminished errors in earnings forecasts. Securities issued by companies that adopt higher disclosure standards have also seen better support from investors.
